

THE HELLENIC WOMEN'S CLUB

The Newsletter of The Hellenic Women's Club, Inc.

Spring 2013

Message from the President

Greetings,

Spring is the time for new beginnings, so I am especially delighted to send you the first annual Hellenic Women's Club, EOK newsletter. These are busy times here at the EOK and thanks to the continued support of patrons like you, we continue to support many worthy charities from Boston to across the Atlantic.

We hope that this newsletter will be of interest to you and allow you to connect with the Greek community in New England. Take a trip down memory lane with a brief history, which highlights how something that started small blossomed into an organization that has distributed over $1,000,000 in the last decade alone. We have included an article on the Demetra Fund for Breast Cancer Research, an initiative begun by EOK member Dr. Helen O'Leary which we hope you will find interesting. As you will read, the recent launch of the Hellenic Women's Club EOK scholarship program has allowed us to grant $5,000 awards to many worthy young women. Finally, we have included photographs through the years from our annual fundraiser, the Mistletoe Ball, where multi-generations come together to mingle, eat, and, of course, dance!

Please accept our heartfelt thank you for all that you have done to help the Hellenic Women's Club EOK continue to support an array of worthy efforts ranging from local shelters to global disaster relief funds; from scholarships to medical research; and from Boston's arts organizations to our Greek Orthodox faith and cultural community.

Stephanie C. Andrews
President, Hellenic Women's Club, Inc.

Mission Statement

The Hellenic Women's Club, Inc., also known as Epsilon Omicron Kappa (EOK), engages in wide reaching philanthropic endeavors while promoting Hellenic ideals, culture, and community in New England. Founded in 1936 by a group of seven women to assist Greek war orphans, the EOK continues today as a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization which is characterized by a hard-working group of uniquely dedicated women who offer their talents, energy, and spirit to the mission of charity.

For three quarters of a century, the Hellenic Women's Club has enjoyed the generous and continued support of its patrons and Sustaining Sponsors. This partnership has allowed the EOK to make annual gifts to a variety of medical, cultural, educational, and institutional organizations in the greater Boston area and beyond. In addition, the EOK is proud to have established the Demetra Fund for Breast Cancer Research in memory of a dear member. To commemorate the Club's 75th Anniversary Diamond Jubilee, the Hellenic Women's Club Scholarship was launched in 2011, honoring its scholarship mission.

The Hellenic Women's Club celebrates philanthropy and community at its annual Mistletoe Ball, which was inaugurated in 1946 and is believed to be the longest consecutive event of its kind in Boston. This holiday benefit, along with a spring event, has enabled the EOK to award more than $1 million to worthy organizations in the past decade alone.

EOK Enjoys Caring, Colorful History

The Hellenic Women's Club came into existence in 1936 when Urania Papas of Newton sent a postcard to six of her friends: "Please come to my house for tea to start a little club."

The seven ladies named their club Ellinikos Omilos Kyrion (EOK), or translated, Hellenic Women's Club. The membership soon expanded to 35 – a welcome outlet for women of similar background. EOK continues today as a close-knit group of women supporting and celebrating their Hellenic heritage.

By 1940, the club established a small scholarship through the Boston Latin Schools. This initiative mushroomed, with scholarships at several area colleges, and annual awards at Hellenic College/Holy Cross and Wellesley College.

With the advent of WWII and the Greek Civil War, the club held its first dinner-dance (at Boston's Hotel Vendome for $6) to support war-torn Greece and the war orphans. An early EOK flyer stated, "The Greek nation is fighting for freedom. It is our fight." In the AHEPA home's basement on Commonwealth Avenue, the ladies rolled bandages and packed clothing and bedding to deliver overseas. For three decades, they sustained their support of orphanages throughout Greece – even shipping one a refrigerator.

The dinner-dances, and later, spring fashion shows and theater brunches enabled an expansion of philanthropy. A piano was sent to the Athens Symphony Orchestra, agricultural equipment to the American Farm School, and an iron lung and wheelchair to Greek children. Larger projects included a computer room at Hellenic College, a garden oasis at the Hellenic Nursing Home, and the refurbishment of bedrooms at Philoxenia House and the Hellenic Cardiac Fund apartments.

On November 23, 1963, members were preparing for the 18th dinner-dance, when word arrived of President Kennedy's assassination. With sadness in their hearts, they cancelled the festivities, but later rescheduled to the Saturday before Christmas. The dinner-dance was thus reborn as the Mistletoe Ball – the highly popular gala that has even welcomed princes and presidential candidates.

Now in its 66th year, the Ball has supported research in thalassemia, lymphoma, and neurological diseases at Boston's major hospitals; dozens of organizations devoted to culture and caring have benefited annually; and most recently, the club has initiated The Demetra Fund to fight breast cancer, the restoration of an ancient Greek marble plaque at the Museum of Fine Arts, and a major in-house scholarship program for Greek-American women.

With the help of thousands of generous supporters, the "little club" conceived in 1936 has achieved 75 years of good works. At the Diamond Jubilee in 2011, Hellenic Women's Club members looked to the future:

"We have kept faith with the ideals of our founders. We stand tall with our heritage, our church, and our community. It is our hope that the goals envisioned by our forebears will endure and flourish in the century ahead with dignity and with grace."

EOK offers young women a chance to soar

Like athletics, education is the bedrock of Greek culture, and now, for the first time ever, the Hellenic Women's Club EOK is annually offering six young women a chance to gain knowledge that one day may transform not only their own lives but the life of the world.

The Hellenic Women's Club Scholarship Fund was launched last year when the Club celebrated its 75th Diamond Jubilee. The fund now annually awards six young women a $5000 scholarship each on the basis of community service, leadership, and academics. The recipients are named each year on the night of the Mistletoe Ball, the Club's landmark fundraising event, and are invited to the Ball as guests of the Club.

Eva Markos, EOK scholarship chair, says: "It is tremendous that the Greek community is so dedicated to our efforts in support of the Ball. Their generosity makes it possible for us to support the education of these young women, and it speaks volumes about how loyal they are."

Pia Kurkuvelos, one of this year's scholarship recipients, writes: "I had a lovely evening and greatly appreciate both your generous support of my academic pursuits through your scholarship, but also the kind gesture of inviting me as a guest to the Ball...I look forward to attending the event in years to come and to becoming more involved in the Hellenic Women's community."

This year's scholarship recipients include: Jasmine Khan of Austin, Texas, a sophomore at Tufts majoring in international relations; Chrisanthe Salemis of Westwood, Ma., a freshman at Tufts studying the classics; Georgia Kostopoulos of Cambridge, Ma., a sophomore at Simmons College studying physical therapy; Victoria Tansey of Peabody, Ma., a freshman at Roger Williams University; Charlotte Parish of Westwood, Ma., a sophomore at Boston College majoring in English and secondary education; and Pia Kurkuvelos of Danvers, a graduate of Harvard University and now a student at Boston College Law School.

This year, the Club awarded two named scholarships. One honored Eugenia Nichols Pergantis, and the other was a gift from The Haseotes Family. Young women, who are U.S. citizens of Greek-American descent or who are of the Greek Orthodox faith; who live in Massachusetts; or who are students at a Massachusetts college or university, are invited to apply.

The Hellenic Women's Club has a long tradition of supporting scholarships, arcing back to the 1930s, when EOK scholarships were first administered through the Boston Latin Schools. Later, in the 1950s, the Club supported Greek-American scholarship students at MIT, Harvard, Boston University, and Tufts; and later it supported students at Hellenic College Holy Cross and Wellesley College, where nine young women of Greek-American descent have received scholarship aid through EOK support.

The Demetra Fund for Breast Cancer Research

Sisters Helen O'Leary and Demetra "Toulie" Samellas

Demetra "Toulie" Samellas as a new EOK member

In early 2001, EOK member Dr. Helen P. O'Leary was distraught to learn that her beloved sister, Demetra "Toulie" Samellas, was at critical risk from an all-too-prevalent diagnosis: breast cancer.

"This disease that afflicts one in eight women was now claiming my sister," says Helen. Her strong desire to help Toulie awakened the idea of establishing an endowment for breast cancer research. She brought it to the Hellenic Women's Club – the ideal organization, she felt, to focus on women's health issues. Club members enthusiastically endorsed her proposal, and with a generous seed gift from Helen, the Demetra Fund for Breast Cancer Research came into existence.

Toulie Samellas had been an EOK member since 1960, serving a two-year term as president. Widowed at age 46 with three teenagers, she had left the ranks of at-home Moms to support her family by managing her husband's electronics business. Shortly thereafter, she experienced her first bout with breast cancer.

"During this difficult, pressured, time in her life, Toulie had no time for outside interests except for the EOK," Helen remembers. "She loved being with the ladies and they offered her support."

Perhaps these caring friends had something to do with Toulie's being able to conquer her disease for 18 years. When the cancer returned, Helen was able to go to the hospital and tell Toulie about the establishment of the Demetra Fund in her honor. Both women cried.

Although Toulie was not able to win her second battle with breast cancer, it gave her comfort to know that a fund bearing her name might bring hope to others in her position. "Demetra, in antiquity, was the earth goddess of fertility and growth and new life," Helen explains. "It was Toulie's given name, and one so appropriate for breast cancer research. It suggests the possibility for women to be resurrected – to be reborn – after treatment."

Demetra "Toulie" Samellas passed away in 2001, but more than a decade later her spirit lives on as the EOK – via a $100,000 grant – supports a clinical trial at the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through her fund. Dr. Judy Garber, working in collaboration across the Atlantic with Katia Karalis PhD at Hygeia Hospital in Athens, is utilizing the award to better understand genetic mutations and their role in breast cancer.

The current Demetra Fund Committee Chair, Pamela Lazares, reports that in looking to the future, the EOK will continue to support worthy projects at recognized cancer-related institutions focusing on basic science and/or patient care.
